

On March 18, 1983 Humbert II of Savoy died in Geneva. The most solemn obsequies took place on March 24 in Hautecombe abbey, in Savoy, where the body had been transferred privately. The announcement of the Holy Shroud donation to the Holy See in the person of the present Pope John Paul II was given in Geneva on March 25, 1983 by the lawyer Armando Radice, who read the following communiqué:

“On March 23, the Count Fausto Solaro del Borgo has given to His Most Reverend Eminence, cardinal Agostino Casaroli, His Holiness’ Secretary of State, a letter of His Majesty Humbert II’s testamentary executors, His Majesty Simeon of Bulgaria and His Royal Highness the Landgrave Mauritius of Assia, by which they begged him to inform His Holiness John Paul II, that the late Monarch had ordered, in his last will and testament, that the Holy Shroud, kept in the Cathedral of Turin, was given in full property to the Supreme Pontiff. His Royal Highness, the Prince of Naples, also on behalf of his entire family, has expressed the joy of being able, respecting his august father’s will – which aims at definitively guaranteeing for the future the entrusting of one of the most precious relics of Our Lord’s Passion to the Holy See – to fulfil a devotion gesture towards the person of the Roman Church Supreme Pontiff. The Prince of Naples has decided that the late Monarch’s will could be communicated to His Holiness John Paul II on the eve of the Holy Year’s opening.”

Here is the original text of the donation document as it was published by the Princess Maria Gabriella of Savoy in the book La Sindone nei secoli nella collezione di Umberto II (The Shroud during the centuries in Humbert II’s collection), Gribaudo, Turin, 1998, pp. 11-15.

*To His Majesty Simeon of Bulgaria
To His Royal Highness Mauritius of Assia*

*In consideration of the secular veneration that the Catholic Church has for the Holy Shroud, kept in the Royal Chapel of Turin Cathedral,
Being sure that the Catholic Hierarchy acknowledges to the House of Savoy, in the person of its Head, the secular rights of property of the Holy Shroud,
Thinking it right and proper for the future to definitively guarantee for the future the entrusting of one of the most precious relics of Our Lord’s Passion to the Church*

I ORDER

That, after my death, the full property of the Holy Shroud be transferred in donation to the Holy See.

Together with the Holy Shroud, also what is linked to the cult of the Same Shroud and kept in the Royal Chapel of Turin Cathedral and turning out to be of my property will have to be donated.

I therefore beg You, as my testamentary executors, to take all the necessary steps, so that the Supreme Pontiff could be made acquainted with my will and he could arrange for the Holy Shroud entrusting.

I want that, for the assignment of the property, a written official document with the Holy See must be drawn up and, in virtue of the present dispositions, You are delegated to proceed to its definition and signing.

Done in Geneva on March 27, 1981

On October 19, 1983 L'Osservatore Romano (The Roman Observer), on its first page, had this short communication:
